Goose & Duck Numbers on the Refuge

Due to the government "shutdown", no one is available to count the birds.

A combine at Kent Farms in Holt County - Powers through corn on Thursday, Oct. 10. "The corn is good this year," Travis Kent said. "[Well,] it's basically good."

Season yielding good harvest

The 2013 harvest is promising to be good, a welcome change for many Missouri farmers who weathered a drought last year that affected crop yields.

"We're looking better," said Jeff Geib, Golden Triangle Energy commodities manager. "The quality's looking good."

Craig, MO, farmer David Drewes agreed. "I'm happy with the yield so far."

Corn has yielded about 180 bushels per acre, according to Randy Altena of Craig Grain and Craig Supply. The soybean yield has averaged about 50 bushels per acre.

The key to this year's harvest, particularly for corn, is drying time. Due to a late planting in the spring and cooler weather conditions, the harvest has been delayed, and corn hasn't yet reached its peak moisture content, which should ideally be 15.5 percent, according to both Geib and Craig resident Travis Kent.

Kent, a furloughed worker with the U.S. Department of Agriculture who is now working on the family farm, explained that moisture content can be a deciding factor for a corn harvest. Based on the hybrid of kernel, drying time can vary, so some farmers will harvest the crop only to then store it so it can dry properly. Some farmers also use short-term methods to change the moisture content.

"If [the moisture content] is at 17 to 18 percent, you can use a fan to get it down to 15.5 percent," Kent said.

Wayne Flanary, agronomy specialist at the University of Missouri Extension, wrote in a recent news release that drying corn can be a tricky but necessary science.

"Some growers choose to field dry corn, [which allows] the moisture to decline," he wrote. "Field drying of corn is best balanced when judging stalk quality, which will ensure that the crop will remain harvestable."

A combine augers corn - During a sunny morning on Thursday, Oct. 10. Farmers have to pay special attention to the moisture content of corn in order to sell it without having to pay a penalty loosely called a dock. The corn harvest is in full swing. "[It's] slowly drying out," Randy Altena of Craig Grain and Craig Supply said. "Slowly."

With such careful attention paid to drying, 2013 crop yields and profits should be acceptable.

"Last year the drought drove prices sky high," Geib said. "This year is a more normal corn year."

It's after harvesting the corn, and in some cases, soybeans, that farmers are tasked with the balancing act between supply and demand. If anything, the post-harvest triggers an economic chess game with farmers on one side, the government and the Chicago Board of Trade on the other.

The price for corn is dropping off, Geib advised, and since it's lower now than last year, farmers are holding their grain in the hope that the price will go up. Right now, the price is $3 per bushel cheaper than last year.

"It's the economics of supply and demand," Geib said.

Until then, farmers are spending days and nights combining corn, augering it into trucks and storing it in grain bins. When the back-and-forth on prices reaches an amenable point, those dedicated farmers can count on reaping the rewards for their work.

Tragedy, injustice befall Maryville, MO, family; Anonymous internet users discuss reprisal

The case could be an episode of Law and Order: SVU. A 14-year-old girl is allegedly raped by a popular, athletic, well-connected high school senior. The girl and her mother press charges, the boy's family supposedly pushes back with home-grown influence, and the case is dropped. Justice and closure are brushed away along with any tears shed by the victim.

The Maryville, MO, story begins like any other involving teenagers: alcohol, risky behavior, recklessness, the ever-present technology of video cell phones, a party in a basement. Daisy Coleman, then 14 years old and previously identified with parental permission in a 4,000-word article in The Kansas City Star, and her friend, a 13-year-old girl, were having a sleepover at the Coleman residence. The girls took a few sips of alcohol hidden in Daisy's closet, then snuck out of the house at 1 a.m. to meet Matt Barnett, then a high school senior, and one of his friends. The four drove to Barnett's house, where they slipped in through a basement window. Once inside, Daisy drank two cups of clear liquid. That's where her memory ends.

Coleman's mother, Melinda, found her daughter the next morning on the front porch, her hair frozen, her body almost hypothermic. The temperature outside was 22 degrees. When Coleman carried her daughter inside and lowered her into a warm bath, she noticed signs of assault. Daisy couldn't remember what happened, but her friend remembered Daisy being taken into a bedroom where she was allegedly raped by Barnett. High school junior Jordan Zech recorded the assault on his phone, though Maryville, MO, officials deny such video exists. The friend also distinctly remembered a crying Daisy being carried out to a car to be driven home.

When Coleman reported the assault, the Nodaway County Sheriff's Office conducted what was, by all accounts, an efficient investigation. Law enforcement officials rounded up the boys involved in the incident, got a search warrant for the Barnett house and collected and tested evidence. Barnett was arrested and charged with sexual assault and endangering the welfare of a

Foreign exchange students spend year in Mound City

Roanne Bonke, 17, and Janine Bludau, 15, sit side by side in the Mound City High School library, both a little shy, both giggling, both typical teenagers.

"I really like it here," Bludau offers.

"Me too," Bonke says.

Although they had never met before coming to Mound City, MO, for the 2013-2014 academic school year, the pair has a lot in common. When returning home, for example, neither will be returning to the houses they left. Bonke, who is originally from Denekamp, a city in the eastern part of the Netherlands, will be heading to a new house; Bludau, who's from Hoexter, a town near Hanover, will be returning to not only a new home, but also a new city: Karlsdorf, in southern Germany.

When asked if they were homesick, however, the girls shook their heads, said "Nah." The only part of home they miss? The food.

"I miss the health food," Bonke said.

Bludau, nodding in agreement, said, "I miss the black bread."

Bonke and Bludau first signed up with Ayusa, a foreign exchange program, to attend school in the U.S. After creating profiles and writing letters, they were chosen by two host families in Mound City. Carolyn and Jason Hall are hosting Bonke; Kim and Donnie Ireland family are hosting Bludau.

The teens are happy to stay with their new, second set of parents and siblings. Bonke, who has a twin sister and an older brother in the Netherlands, now has a sister in ninth grade, Sydney, and an older brother, Drew. Bludau, who has a 13-year-old brother in Germany, has earned two more brothers, Justyn, 17, and Jacob, 6. Despite their expanded relationships, the girls strive to maintain a connection with their families in Europe. Text messaging, email and Skype dates help.

"I talk [to them] on the weekends," Bonke said.

Bludau, luckily, is able to send and receive texts from her mom, though the time difference can be a challenge.

In the meantime, Bonke and Bludau are embracing the American teenage life: hanging out with friends, playing sports, driving around. Bonke has made her mark on the varsity volleyball team, and Bludau is a strong runner. In Germany, Bludau is also a talented break dancer, a skill that should serve her well at the Homecoming dance. "Yeah," Bludau agrees, blushing.

Bonke adds that the two are going Homecoming dress shopping in St. Joseph, MO, before the Oct. 18 Homecoming coronation. They are honorary queens this year.

"I'm excited," Bonke offers.

"Me too," Bludau says.

Janine Bludau, right, and Roanne Bonke, left - Pose in the library at Mound City High School in Mound City, MO, where they will be studying for the next year.

New Mound City, MO, employee Anissa Brandon - Sits at her desk. Oct. 7 through the 14 was her first week on the job as collector/deputy clerk.

Annissa Brandon joins Mound City City Hall

Annissa Brandon is no stranger to numbers and money. Before becoming the new collector/deputy clerk for Mound City, Brandon worked at Citizens Bank and Trust in Craig, MO, for seven years.

"I'm on the opposite side now, making the deposits instead of being the one to receive them," Brandon said with a smile.

Although she's only been at her new position for a short while (Brandon started the week of Oct. 7), she feels comfortable. "It's been good," Brandon said. "I like the accounting part of it."

Brandon brushed away the idea that she was a numbers person, but her colleague, Patsy Smith, City Clerk, asserted that Brandon is capable, especially since Smith described the job as "collecting all revenue that comes into the city."

Aside from its mathematical and financial appeal, Brandon was drawn to the collector/deputy clerk position because it allowed her the opportunity to move to Mound City, MO, from Craig. Her husband is originally from Mound City, and her three children, ages 11, 8 and 4, go to school across the street from City Hall.

Helping to smooth the transition to a new job, Friday, Oct. 11, happened to be Smith's birthday. Plastic containers on Brandon's desk held snickerdoodles and glazed donuts, and the two women, who share an office, seemed pleased with each other's company.

"I haven't been here very long," Brandon said, "[but] yes, I do like it so far."

Big Muddy Duck Hunt

The Big Muddy Duck Hunt, which had its inaugural year in 2012, is returning on Saturday, Oct. 19. It will be held at the Sportsman's Lodge in Bigelow, MO, from 10:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. with hunting in duck blinds to take place in the afternoon.

More of a clinic than a hunt, the Big Muddy Duck Hunt is a chance for military parents to train their children in the art and science of duck hunting. Last year, the Missouri Department of Conservation held the clinic for members of the 139th Air Wing Unit of the Air National Guard at Rosecrans in St. Joseph, MO. Fifteen children, along with their parents, gathered to discuss firearm safety and practice shooting clay pigeons with conservation instructors. The group was also given lessons on duck hunting calls, identification, strategies, regulations and waterfowl habitats. After the training courses, children and their parents were able to try their hand at live practice.

The Department of Conservation raised more than $1,000, according to an Air National Guard report, to host last year's clinic.

This year, the Big Muddy Duck Hunt is hoping for double the amount of participants than last year. Activities planned include dog training and field retrieval, shooting skills, and waterfowl management, among others.

Remembering

By Eugene Poytner

"Benches" - Oh, for a good place to sit down either to rest or just enjoy sitting and rehashing the problems of the world with others or maybe just sit and day dream. When I was young and didn't like to sit still too long, there were plenty of benches to pick from and now that they would come in handy, where did they go? Every store, whatever kind of business, usually had a couple outside and a few inside, but the best thing they used to have was a wide long set of steps out in front. On a Saturday night, the steps were usually full. In some locations, you'd be picked up for loitering. Of course in our up-to-date malls, generally in the center and handy to all, you can go and sit and drink and eat food as long as you want, but that's different.

The best example of recognizing the need for a good place for a few minutes or all day resting was in Hawesville, KY. At the courthouse on all four sides, where it was possible, they had built benches where one could always find a sunny or cool place to rest. The few times we were there, the courthouse had a lot of people sitting around and all you had to do was stop and there was a place for you and plenty to listen to or talk with. I always thought that would be a good place to retire. One of the business places here in town has a bench in front that usually has someone on it, so the other day, I went over and sat with ones there. It was a good feeling and sitting there brought back a lot of memories. I guess that always happens, when a person can get relaxed for a little while, free from every day stress. Our town is an exception, in that there are several more benches around, but not many people using them. The need for benches is still here, however.

The early churches, being built in large cities, allowed families and individuals to purchase and furnish a pew for themselves only. I guess that was a way to get one built. Even today we all have our favorite place to sit in church, restaurants, theaters and even where we like to sit in the car and at the kitchen table. Remember when we were kids and it was always, from a brother or sister, "move, you're sitting in my place?" In Texas, we belonged to a large church and the minister said, every so often, everyone in the church stand up, move to a different seat, and get better acquainted. When the word came to do this, only a few stood up to move. Where we were sitting, we all decided, like most of the rest of the church, that we liked our little gathering and didn't move. There is something about us that we like to keep our favorite spots, benches, etc. The minister's idea was right, but I guess we weren't ready. Habits are hard to stop, maybe that's a good thing.

For years, all seats in our cars were bench type seats. Now the front seats are bucket type seats and even pickups with their extended four door jobs have them. The good thing is the buckets can be adjusted six to eight ways for comfort and safety, so they are here to stay. I don't think the bucket seats will ever take the place of the properly placed benches outside or inside the business places and around the courthouse, parks or stadiums, at least I hope not, for I'll sure miss them. Hey, go find a bench, sit, meditate and just see how much better you feel.

Tragedy, injustice befall Maryville, MO, family; Anonymous internet users discuss reprisal

child; Zech was charged with the sexual exploitation of a minor. Barnett stated he knew Daisy was under the influence of alcohol. He also admitted to the act and claimed it was consensual. Under Missouri law, however, when a person is incapacitated by alcohol, any sexual acts are considered non-consensual.

Nodaway County Sheriff Darren White, who felt the department put together a prosecutable case, tied up the investigation in a neat bow and passed it off to the prosecutor, Robert Rice. It was with Rice that the Coleman case stopped. All charges against the boys were dismissed.

Some believe that the case drew up short because of family influence, according to The Kansas City Star report. Barnett is the grandson of Rex Barnett, former Missouri state representative; the Barnett family also has close ties to prosecutor Rice. Both Rice and Barnett deny any favors or undue influence affected the outcome of the case.

As it stands now, the Coleman family, whose Maryville, MO, house mysteriously burned down last April, remains unsatisfied, frustrated and generally angry about the case. Although she has been going to therapy, Daisy Coleman has twice tried to commit suicide. Before leaving Maryville to move to Albany, MO, Daisy and her siblings were also repeatedly bullied. One girl even showed up to a dance competition wearing a T-shirt emblazoned with "Matt 1, Daisy 0."

The incident has marred both the Coleman family and the city of Maryville. The Colemans believe they were essentially run out of town and not taken seriously because they were outsiders. Sheriff White, though he says his department did a good job with its investigation, was quoted as saying, "The fact that the family wasn't from Maryville made it a lot easier for the prosecutor to drop the charges." Coleman also claims that Prosecutor Rice never informed her of his decision to drop the charges, never spoke to her and never returned phone calls; Rice denies these allegations.

Although the case occurred in 2012, it is still a tangible presence felt in what was previously perceived to be a charming college town. Like Steubenville, OH, Maryville, MO, is now associated with the alleged assault, and media coverage of it has whipped through the internet like a brush fire. Anonymous hackers, who actively ferreted out information in the Steubenville, OH, rape case, have shifted their focus to Maryville. The group of nameless, faceless computer-savvy vigilantes are determined to provide Daisy Coleman justice. The Twitter hashtags #Justice4Daisy and #OpMaryville are now trending. Whether these powerful computer-based independent investigators will have an effect on the case remains to be seen. If their past efforts are any indication (they exposed the lack of prosecutions and subsequent suicides of alleged rape victims Amanda Todd and Rehtaeh Parsons to the media), Maryville will soon be at the center of an unwanted spotlight. Northwest Missouri State University's Homecoming is set to kick off the weekend of Oct. 18, and with the Oct. 12 publication of The Kansas City Star article, Maryville residents, and those participating in the Homecoming celebrations, should perhaps anticipate a harsher glare of attention.

Holt County counts 300 concealed carry permits

Starting Aug. 28, 2013, the Missouri legislature handed down the responsibility of processing permits for concealed carry handguns to individual county sheriffs. In Holt County, Sheriff Scott Wedlock and Lydia Campbell, communications specialist, are the team behind the permits.

Each county handles permits differently, according to Campbell. In Andrew County, Savannah Reporter writer Kenny Ragland investigated the sheriff's office's handling of permits; there, the office deals with more than 1,000 concealed carry permits. Holt County deals with about a third of that amount: 300, give or take.

What makes Holt County's processing different is that the sheriff's office strove to improve its record keeping after a 2012 audit. The process of applying for a permit is also simpler and more streamlined now, according to Wedlock, and applicants don't have to deal with various bureaucracies; it's essentially one-stop shopping for gun owners.

"It's a convenience thing," Wedlock said.

For Holt County residents looking to purchase a concealed carry permit, which costs $100, there is a step-by-step process that must be followed. First, a resident should make an appointment with the sheriff's office. Second, assuming the resident is eligible for the permit, he or she must bring proof of firearm safety training, personal identification and the application fee to the office in Oregon, MO. Third, the sheriff's office conducts a background check to make sure the applicant has no criminal record. The office also takes fingerprints using a digital biometric scanner. Finally, once the sheriff's office has received written approval regarding the background check from the FBI, a permit is issued.

One of the changes also penned by the Missouri legislature includes the physical permit. Rather than appearing on a driver's license, the permit is a separate document that does not show the carrier's picture.

For those looking to update their personal information, report a lost or damaged permit, or renew a permit, which costs $50, they need only stop by the sheriff's office. Campbell is on hand to answer questions and handle permits. She also designed a pamphlet for those wanting more information.

"It's my baby," Campbell said. As to why Holt County residents who are not a part of law enforcement apply for concealed carry permits, the sheriff's office isn't sure.

"It's a second amendment issue," Wedlock offered.

Train history to be presented in Maitland

The Holt County Historical Society will be presenting a program on a former Maitland, MO, train on Sunday, Nov. 3 at 2 p.m. in the Legion Building in Maitland, MO. The eastbound train originally came north from Forest City, MO, through Bigelow, MO, before making a stop at the Mound City Depot. The train track crossed Highway 59, near the home of Nida Messick, and made stops at Whig Valley, Decker's Switch, Galvin Ranch and other sites before heading in to Maitland. The train then continued north to Villisca, IA, before turning around to repeat the route. According to Historical Society members, many remember boarding the train in the morning to visit relatives, shop or see a doctor and then returning home at the end of the day.

Ramona Shields will trace the trail of the train. All guests are welcome, and "May the Past Inspire the Future," which details the history of Maitland, will be available for purchase. Tiffany Heights resident, Charles Milby, front - Enjoyed a cooking class on Tuesday morning, October 8, at Tiffany Heights in Mound City. Residents made raw apple cookies that included no dairy products or eggs.

News from Tiffany Heights

Residents at Tiffany Heights in Mound City enjoyed a seasonal craft on Monday, October 7. They made jack-o-lantern door hangers. They were made from wood and residents painted them orange and added orange sprinkles and a ribbon for hanging. Shirley Jackson and Joan Smith assisted with the craft. Shirley treated everyone with sugar cookies after the craft.

On Tuesday morning, residents enjoyed listening to chapters from the "Unpacking Memories" book about Dr. Sweaney. During the afternoon, a cooking class was held. This time residents made raw apple cookies. This recipe had no dairy products and no eggs. It made a delicious cookie though. Everyone enjoyed them with apple cider.

On Wednesday, residents enjoyed a word game. They discussed the history of Halloween and then were asked questions about this fun fall activity. Each resident got a chance to answer a question and everyone received a certificate for a free bingo prize for giving the right answers.

Dee Ann Heck provided beautiful piano music before lunch on Thursday. Bingo volunteers were Shirley Jackson, Jean McCall, Gordon Robbins and Lucille Stull. Winners of the game were Charles Milby and Delores Howard.

Glamour nails were held during the morning on Friday. Residents also enjoyed several rounds of ring toss on Friday morning. Winners of the games were Charles Milby, Lois Woods and Mary Klein. A fall festival was held during the afternoon on Friday. Residents enjoyed apple cider and warm fresh donuts. They were entertained with special piano music provided by Dorothy Egbert and Mary Klein. The walk and roll program for the last six months ended in September and residents received their certificates. Residents are encouraged to walk or roll each week and their steps are counted. They receive a certificate for a free bingo prize each time they achieve a mile. At the end of the six months, the top three walker/rollers' names from each hall are put into a basket and a champion is drawn. The top three get a lunch out at a restaurant of their choice. During the last six months, the participants have been: South Hall- Betty Dick, Mary Klein, Dorothy Egbert, Lucille Norman, Dora Routh, Judy Carney, Inez VanOrman, Twyla Haer, Dolores Hawkins, Lois Woods, Eva Ruth Andes and Mary Lou Nauman; North Hall- Ken Privett, Emma Wright, Delores Howard, Charles Milby, Dorothy Gilland, Bill Catron, Jeane Crouse, Betty Elder, Shirley Staples, Audrey Heck and Carol Ball. The halls have been walked a combined total of 112,869 feet. The top three walker/rollers from each hall were: South- Inez VanOrman, Judy Carney and Lois Woods; North- Carol Ball, Charles Milby and Emma Wright. Winners of the drawing were Judy Carney and Carol Ball. Everyone did a great job. Games of choice were encouraged on Saturday afternoon.

Larry Brickey and the Mound City Baptist Church family provided Sunday morning services. Afternoon worship was conducted by the United Methodist Church.

MOUND CITY MEMORIES

Rodney O. Gibson, in a phone call and an e-mail, provided a wonderful history of the businesses on the south end of Mound City's Main Street in the 1930's. He attended Mound City School and quit to join the Air Force. His family lived on the corner of 7th and High streets and he moved to live in California in 1948.

Beginning at Davis Creek and coming north on the west side was Henry Bickel's Cafe. It was "full all the time". D.L. Warren's Machine and Welding Shop was next. Then there was a lean-to for storage of the new cars for the E.A. Pence Ford Garage that was located on the edge of the alleyway. On the 21st of March in 1935 or 36 there was a "whiteout" snowstorm, it was so bad that school children could not leave the school, and the lean-to fell in. Fred Rockwell owned the business later.

Next was the Lumber Yard and Al Arnold had his Shoe and Harness Repair on the south side of the building and Harold Robinson worked for him and lived in the back. Later, Harold owned the business and Jack McKillip and Gibson both worked for him and received credit at school. On the north part was the Bowling Alley. In later years, Garney Bowers Grocery located there. Gibson also worked at the bowling alley for Hap Hitchcock setting pins before the pin setters were in style. Next was the Phillips 66 Gas Station on the corner.

On the east side of the street coming north from Davis Creek Bridge was Chris Young's Garage on the corner of 4th Street. He sold Chrysler and Plymouth autos. Clyde Thompson's mule shed was next, which later was Bone Orley's Auto shop. It was next to Gibson's dad's blacksmith shop, Gibson and Son, that was directly across from the E.A. Pence Garage. Idecker Garage was in the back; Pete Travis and Granville White worked there on tractors and autos and Gibson worked there for a time (with them giving him direction).

Next was a small building where Henry Bickel moved for a larger place for his cafe. On the south side of Carter's Store is where Bill Bahl ran a hardware store. Later Vaughn Moss did likewise. Mona Bickel had a beauty shop in a side entrance. Carter's Store had two sections: one for dry goods and one for groceries.

(Note: Corrections are welcomed if the society didn't get it all correct).

This Week's History

From the Mound City News archives

50 Years Ago - 1963

- Sam Wilson, proprietor of the Wilson Motor Company, moved his auto repair business across the street into the "Coca Cola" building occupied by the Mound City division of the St. Joseph Bottling Company. That business was moved temporarily into the location vacated by Mr. Wilson, with plans to construct a building later on for the bottling company.

- Marine Private Jerry D. Travis and Marine Private Jackie L. Crowley, both of Mound City, completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, California.

- The closing of the H.A. Peters store in Corning leaves the community without the services of a grocery and general store, and represents a major loss to the area. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peters, who owned and operated the business for the past 20 years, arrived at this sad decision because of failing health. Previous to their ownership, Mr. Peters managed the store for a number of years for the Schooler Bros. This leaves the sundry store operated by Mrs. Juanita Ware as the only business enterprise of this type continuing to operate in Corning.

25 Years Ago - 1988

- Mound City's Griffith Park was formally dedicated in honor of Hestherlynn Griffith and her late husband, E.K. Griffith. The City Council approved the measure to dedicate the park, located at the north end of Nebraska Street, in appreciation of the contributions to the park and other civic activities by the Griffiths.

- Mound City's first fountain was dedicated in Fountain Park at Evans Circle in honor of Carson McCormack, Jr. McCormack had been actively involved in Evans Circle throughout the history of the housing development. The idea of the fountain was born in a gathering of the Knights of the Round Table.

- Rick Miller approached the City Council concerning the lack of progress in obtaining the theatre building. The theatre group had adopted by-laws and was incorporating. Members were anxious to get started with some necessary repairs before winter.

- Kelly Holstine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Holstine, was crowned the homecoming queen at the Mound City-Union Star football game.

10 Years Ago - 2003

- Mound City homecoming queen candidates were senior Sonya Hargin, junior Jennifer Miles, sophomore Brittany Johnson, and freshman Jessica Vergith.

- Craig senior Chelsa Altena was crowned Craig's homecoming queen. Her escort was Jason Mick. Brandon Reynolds and Melissa Rich were crowned South Holt homecoming king and queen.

- Members held a "mutiny" at Christian Fellowship Church - they refused to let their pastor, Jim Brown, preach his planned sermon. The members staged a "coup de pulpit" - it was a surprise celebration for his 50th birthday.

- The Mound City Junior High beat DeKalb 40-0 in football to complete a 6-0 season.

- Brothers Jonathan and Jacob Schoonover played football together for the Mound City Panthers and were continuing to play together as Griffons at Missouri Western State College in St. Joseph.

Mound City varsity and junior high girls win

The Mound City Lady Panthers hosted the St. Joe Christian Lady Lions in varsity and junior high volleyball action on Tuesday, October 8, at the gym in Mound City. The Lady Panthers won the varsity match in two games, with the Mound City girls also winning the junior high match in three games.

Mound City Coach Kayla Schoonover commented on the junior high contest, "These girls played hard and showed so much growth throughout the season to end their final match with a WIN!"

Peggy Caputo - Took time off from her cancer treatments to donate to the Holt County Toy Fund and attend the Big Lake Oktoberfest, Steph Miller of Miller Realty, Inc. said.

Big Lake, MO, holds first Oktoberfest on Saturday

The Big Lake Improvement Association hosted its first Oktoberfest on Saturday, Oct. 12, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Lakeshore Drive in Big Lake, MO.

David Ray, president of the Association, estimated 200 to 225 people attended. As to why the Association decided to host the festival, Ray said simply, "We wanted to wrap up the end of the season here at Big Lake as we move into winter."

Participants listened to live music and snacked on hot dogs, hamburgers and brats while kids batted at pinatas, had their faces painted and played horseshoes and ladder golf. Skilled cooks competed in a chili cook-off, and families and friends sat around a bonfire. A full-sized pig, which yielded 60 to 70 pounds of meat, roasted in a box covered in charcoal. Cornhusker fans, before joining in the festivities of Oktoberfest, watched Nebraska crush Purdue 44 to 7 on a big screen.

"[We just wanted to] offer folks a good afternoon," Ray said.

There was no admission fee for the event, though participants were encouraged to give free will donations at the food line. Any money raised was put towards the cost of the event, which appeared to be a success.

"We think it went really well," Ray said.

Quick draw lottery starts for waterfowl hunters

Missouri hunters may have more options when it comes to duck season this year. The Missouri Department of Conservation (DOC) has allocated more space for hunters, and the quick draw starts Friday, Oct. 18.

The DOC has allocated one-quarter of all hunting areas in Grand Pass, Eagle Bluffs and Otter Slough conservation areas to be given to hunters who cannot make reservations and are unsuccessful in the twice weekly quick draw drawings, a lottery system that assigns hunters to prime locations with ADA-accessible blinds.

Hunters can register for the first drawing at Grand Pass starting at 12:01 a.m. on Oct. 18. Registration will close at 3 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 21. For Eagle Bluffs and Otter Slough, registration runs from 12:01 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 25, through 3 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 28.

After the initial drawings, applications will open from 12:01 a.m. on Friday through 3 p.m. on Monday for the following weekend. Applications for Tuesday through Thursday hunting reservations will be open from 12:01 a.m. Tuesday through 3 p.m. Thursday the previous week.

While hunters who participate in the quick draw ("poor-liners") are not always guaranteed a spot, they've secured 56.5 percent of hunting spots after reservation holders were no-shows. Poor-line hunters are always guaranteed at least 20 percent of hunting spots.

Children decorate pumpkins in time for Halloween - At the Helping Hand Hoedown. The weather was chilly, but the members of the Holt County Cancer Fund said, but the event was worthwhile.

Helping Hand Hoedown a hit in Holt County

The Third Annual Helping Hand Hoedown on Sunday, Oct. 6, proved to be a success, judging by the reactions of young attendees.

According to a press release by the Holt County Cancer Fund, which hosts the hoedown, one junior high student from South Holt said, "We've come every year; it's such a fun time." A young elementary student brought $10 from both her savings and spending money to donate to the Cancer Fund, and a 12-year-old resident of St. Joseph, MO, was overheard sharing his delight at being able to participate in a Lego-building competition. An adult version of the competition may be available at next year's Helping Hand Hoedown.

Other activities at the Hoedown included a marshmallow roast, scavenger hunt, monster cookie walk, hula hoop contest, stick horse relay, football toss and cupcake and pumpkin decorating. A silent auction and baked goods auction were also held. The event concluded with a candlelight ceremony led by Pastor Paul Grant. After candles were lit, the names of cancer survivors and those who lost their battle to the disease were read, and helium-filled balloons were released.

Held at Paradise Park in Oregon, MO, the Helping Hand Hoedown raises money for those who are unable to afford travel to and from cancer treatments. They afford $300 per year to applicable patients and have helped 39 Holt County residents since May 2011.

For those dealing with cancer, the following Holt County Cancer Fund members may be contacted: Phyllis Danner, (660) 446-3479; Mary Ann Showalter, (660) 683-5438; Carol Brandon, (660) 446-3754; and Connie Gordon, (660) 446-3420.

Injuries plague Nodaway-Holt as the Trojans fall to Rock Port

The Nodaway-Holt Trojans of Graham, MO, hosted the Rock Port, MO, Blue Jays on Friday, October 11, in varsity football action. The game went three quarters before the injury plagued Nodaway-Holt team lost to the Blue Jays by a score of 60-12.

The Trojans have suffered many injuries this year and thus have had to count on the younger members of the team to step up. "We just have to get better. Our lack of numbers hurts. We are asking a lot of our young athletes to step in and win games against quality opponents," said Nodaway-Holt Coach Josh Petersen, "and that is a lot to expect of them."

The Trojans will travel to Mound City on Friday, October 18, to face an undefeated Panther squad. Game time is 7:00 p.m.

State Theater anniversary celebration a success

Singer Billy McGuigan - Performs at the State Theater anniversary show on Sunday, Oct. 13, in Mound City, MO. His show, Rock Legends, featured popular songs from the 1950s through the 1980s. One theater patron from Rock Port, MO, commented that "the impersonations were phenomenal; it was a wonderful concert."

Guests at the State Theater 25th Anniversary celebration - Gather at the White Rose restaurant for a post-show reception. Approximately 52 people attended the reception, many of whom raved about the Rock Legends concert.

Mound City Elementary students get fired up

Mrs. Walker's preschool class at Mound City Elementary School - Listens to a lecture by Ryan Oswald (truck window) on fire safety in Mound City, MO, on Wednesday, Oct. 9. Oswald quizzed students on the kind of truck he was in ("a fire truck!"), what color it was ("red!"), and where the ladder was located ("on top!"). "Police and firemen love kids so much that we want to keep you safe," Oswald said.

Expiring food stamp waiver to leave thousands hungry

A policy change by the Missouri Department of Social Services could leave those in need without access to food stamps, according to a Capitol Report press release. The proposed change would cause more than 58,000 people to forfeit food stamp benefits.

A 2009 federal waiver, which was implemented when Missouri took money from the federal stimulus, allowed unemployed, healthy adults without children to apply for a federal food stamp program. Missouri officials are now proposing that the state government allow the waiver to expire, potentially to motivate beneficiaries to find work.

Under the new proposal, the federal waiver for expanded food stamp coverage would only apply in counties that have an unemployment rate higher than 10 percent. Adults receiving benefits in the applicable counties would have three months to find a job that requires a commitment of at least 20 hours per week. Eligible adults can also enroll in a federally approved job training program. In counties where unemployment is less than 10 percent, adults can only receive food stamps for three months during a three-year period.

Jeanette Mott Oxford, executive director of the Missouri Association for Welfare, said that the rule change would not be an effective incentive for the unemployed to find work.

"Making people hungry does nothing to actually improve our economy in any way," Oxford said. "Hunger is actually a debilitator rather than a motivator when it comes to employment."

Craig R-3 Superintendent Mike Leach - Stands on the recently repaved asphalt playground in Craig, MO. The playground, which sports seesaws, swing sets and a basketball hoop, also doubles as a parking lot.

Craig R-3 gets new playground

The playground at Craig R-3 school in Craig, MO, has had a facelift: rather than being a grassy knoll with bumps and dips, the playground is smooth and black, the perfect surface on which to run around, play basketball, swing and teeter-totter.

"[The students] have been excited," Craig R-3 Superintendent Mike Leach said. "They enjoy the smooth surface; there's no slipping and sliding [like on] gravel."

The school district first targeted its outdoor facilities last year. According to Leach, the administrators of the school take a tour every year to determine what needs fixing. Previous years have seen roof improvements, but 2013's upgrades took a different direction.

"This year we focused a lot on outside grounds," Leach said. "The old playground was in pretty bad shape."

The school decided in May to take on the new project, though discussions had been going on for three years. The school board examined bids by construction companies and settled on Keller Construction out of St. Joseph, MO. While the remodel was scheduled for July, delays pushed the work to September.

Keller Construction crews took three days to clean up the grounds, patch and level the surface and put down a 2-inch overlay. The payment for the new asphalt, which cost $37,000, came out of the 2013-2014 budget.

Leach is hoping the school's next project will be the second playground, which sits on a grassy field. School board members, however, are still considering the project. Either way, parents are happy, students are happy, and Leach is happy.

Mound City Elementary School preschooler Maycee Jo Crider, right, - Beams at Mound City, MO, Fire Chief J.R. Rother, left, as she pushes a button that lowers the ladder from the top of the fire truck on Wednesday, Oct. 9. She, along with kindergarten and first grade students, learned about what to do during a fire as part of Fire Prevention Week, which lasted from Oct. 6 through 12.
